Danish-grandmother zucchini, stuffed for the sukkah

Jessica Elisheva Emerson's cheddar-and-sour-cream squash – stuffed vegetables for Sukkot with a family twist.

Jessica Elisheva Emerson shared her Danish grandmother's stuffed zucchini with the Jewish Food Society – a Sukkot open-house staple that nods to the custom of serving stuffed vegetables.

Boil the zucchini briefly, scoop and dry the flesh, sauté it with onion in butter, then fold in sharp cheddar and sour cream. Fill the shells, bake, broil with paprika, and send leftovers over rice or eggs.

STYLE DESK · FALL 2026

Cognac suede, cowboy polish, and a slouchy shaft

Lauren Tappan's Sep 11 Marie Claire boot guide tracks Fall 2026 runway footwear for cooler Toronto evenings.

Skin-tight shafts, pared-down cowboy boots, cognac-and-copper brown suede, and intentionally slouchy gathers lead the edit.

For a Sukkot II birthday or a Distillery evening, the practical Canadian read is sturdy coverage you can walk in.

Olive Days

Jessica Elisheva Emerson's novel – kitchen-minded fiction from the same cook behind today's stuffed zucchini. A calm read once Holiday Ends and the balloons settle.

Cognac boots, dry ground

Save the new suede for a Distillery evening; the sukkah mats can wait for a shoe you already trust.

Event details can change; check the listing before going.

DEAR TIMES

Boots to a sukkah birthday?

Dear Times, Jonah-Jonathan's birthday runs 4:00–6:00 under Sukkot II, and Holiday Ends at 7:48. Marie Claire says cognac boots are the fall move, but the sukkah floor is still gravelly from last night's greens. Do I wear the new boots to the party, or keep them for Distillery pretzels another day?

— Sole-Searching in Toronto

Dear Sole-Searching, Pack the boots for the party photo, then switch to something you already trust before anyone chases a balloon across the sukkah mats. Cognac can wait for a dry Distillery evening; the cake will not mind.
