DAILY BRIEF — ZORAH'S DAILY HOME

YOUR DAY

Hockey at 1:30, Zachary's party at 5:30, Shabbat ends at 5:45

Cheshvan 27 · Chayei Sara · Sabres vs Jets · Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/

Zorah, Jonah's Sabres play the Jets in exhibition #5 at Bill Bolton from 1:30 to 2:30 this afternoon. It is about 10°C under cloudy skies, with a low near 2°C and no rain in the forecast.

Zachary's birthday party runs 5:30 to 7:30 at Zachary's house. Shabbat ends at 5:45, so the first fifteen minutes of the party window are still Shabbat – leave after Havdalah and arrive a little late by design.

Sunday is swimming at 12:55 and Week 2 lunches begin. Monday brings hamburger lunch and Sigd. Tuesday is Rosh Chodesh Kislev. Wednesday is Remembrance Day, including the Grade 8 ceremony.

COOKING

A 35-minute black-eyed pea stew with Swiss chard and dill

Serious Eats softens onion, fennel, and carrot, then finishes with lemon and yogurt

Marianne Williams's black-eyed pea stew – flagged in Serious Eats' November editors' picks – softens red onion, fennel, and carrot in olive oil, then blooms garlic, smoked paprika, cumin, and black pepper before diced tomatoes, canned black-eyed peas, and vegetable broth take a short simmer. Swiss chard wilts in at the end; lemon juice and dill finish off heat. A spoon of Greek yogurt, more dill, and a drizzle of oil round each bowl.

It is already vegetarian and takes about 35 minutes for four. Our note for a kosher kitchen: skip the yogurt (or serve it as a dairy meal with kosher yogurt) and confirm the vegetable broth is kosher if you want the stew pareve. That swap is ours, not the recipe's. Good after a cool Saturday of hockey.

FASHION

Eight winter it-buys: shearling flats, colour-pop scarves, buckle boots

Remy Farrell's November 6 edit puts comfort first without giving up polish: shearling flats (Mary Janes and ballerinas especially), colour-pop scarves in red, cobalt, green, or violet over a neutral coat, and buckle boots from sleek leather to biker hardware. Zip-up jumpers – boosted by Matthieu Blazy's Chanel pre-fall camel – sit between cardigan and sweatshirt.

The rest of the list is texture: faux-fur stoles for evening without sequins, corduroy trousers in chocolate or burgundy, 'ziger'-print bags that mix zebra stripe with tiger colour, and knee-length leather skirts that keep the silhouette sharp in the cold. Practical for a cloudy Toronto Saturday between the rink and a birthday party.

THE TOWN

ON THE TOWN

Royal Agricultural Winter Fair – still open through Nov. 15

Through Sun Nov 15 at Exhibition Place. Day two of the 104th Royal: horse show, livestock, culinary demos, and the holiday market. A natural Sunday window after Jonah's 12:55 swim, or any afternoon later in the week.

Toronto Art Crawl Christmas Market – today at The Bentway

Sat Nov 7, daytime at The Bentway. Thirteenth annual market with about 140 handpicked artists, food vendors, and DJ sets. Saturday daytime falls during Shabbat, so treat it as an FYI; the Royal through next Sunday is the easier family window.

DEAR TIMES

The party starts at 5:30. Shabbat ends at 5:45. Do we walk in early?

Dear Times, Zachary's birthday is 5:30 to 7:30. Havdalah is not until 5:45. The gift is wrapped and the coat is by the door. Is it all right to arrive at 5:30 and keep a low profile until Shabbat ends, or do we wait the full fifteen minutes and walk in a little late?

— Gift in Hand, Toronto

Dear Reader, Wait the fifteen minutes. Arriving at 5:45 is fashionably late by design, not rudeness – hosts who know the family will understand. Use the gap for Havdalah, a quick check that the gift card is signed, and a calm exit. Fifteen minutes late with Shabbat fully ended beats fifteen minutes early with one foot still in the day.
