DAILY BRIEF — ZORAH'S DAILY HOME

YOUR DAY

Remembrance Day opens in sunshine, with showers coming tonight

Kislev 1 · Rosh Chodesh, day 2 · Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/

Zorah, today is Remembrance Day and the second day of Rosh Chodesh Kislev, Kislev 1 on the school calendar. Grade 8 holds its Remembrance Day ceremony at school, and lunch is sushi with edamame. Jonah has an 8:30 a.m. appointment on the family calendar.

Environment Canada calls for a mainly sunny start, with cloud building through the morning and a 30 percent chance of showers late this afternoon. The high is 11°C, a few degrees above the normal of 8. Tonight turns cloudy with a 60 percent chance of showers and an east wind of 30 km/h gusting to 50; the low is 4.

Thursday starts cloudy with a chance of showers, then clears to sun and cloud, with a high of 7 and the wind still gusting to 50. The rest of the week settles at 5 or 6 degrees under a mix of sun and cloud. Friday brings the 2:30 dismissal, progress reports and candles at 4:36. The Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/ keeps the running household list.

COOKING

Smashed potatoes that come with their own Parmesan crisps

Serious Eats roasts them on a preheated sheet pan at 475°F and holds back the garlic butter and cheese until the potatoes have browned

Serious Eats published these crispy garlic-Parmesan smashed potatoes on Tuesday, developed by Marianne Williams in the Birmingham, Alabama, test kitchen and introduced by senior culinary editor Leah Colins. The potatoes boil first, rest so their surfaces dry, then get smashed to about half an inch thick and land on a preheated rimmed baking sheet with olive oil, on the lowest rack at 475°F.

The garlic flavour goes into butter on the stovetop, where smashed cloves cook gently until lightly golden and are then strained out so nothing burns in the oven. Butter and Parmesan go on partway through, with cheese under and over each potato so it bakes into a thin, lacy frico. Let them sit a few minutes before lifting with a thin spatula. Our note for a kosher kitchen, not the recipe's: with butter and Parmesan, this is a side for a dairy meal.

FASHION

November's easiest uniform: a plaid shirt, jeans and ballet pumps

Allyson Payer's pick for Who What Wear comes from Lila Moss, who stepped out in three low-key pieces: jeans, a plaid shirt and classic ballet pumps. Payer calls the plaid shirt an enduring fall-and-winter trend that is also a basic, and ballet pumps a trend that has not let up all year.

Her point is ease. November is busy and gets dark early, so an outfit that needs no thought earns its place, and on colder days a coat or scarf goes over the top without changing the look. With showers possible late this afternoon and gusts to 50 tonight, keep the pumps for indoors and the scarf close.

Reel Asian turns 30, opening tonight at Hot Docs

The Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival, Canada's largest pan-Asian film festival, opens its 30th edition tonight at 7:30 at the Hot Docs Ted Rogers Cinema. Screenings and events run across downtown Toronto through November 21, including TIFF Lightbox and OCAD University, and the festival streams across Canada from November 16 to 29, according to Reel Asian's program guide.

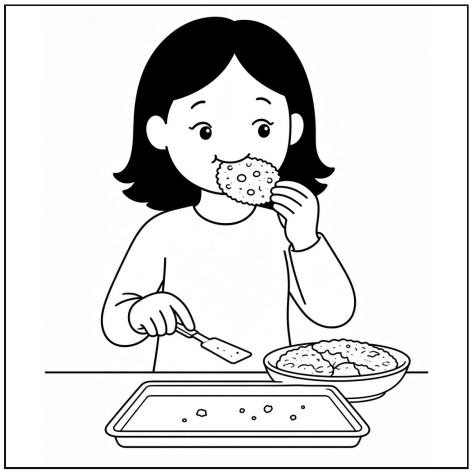

PUZZLES

Boil, rest, then onto a hot sheet pan to smash.

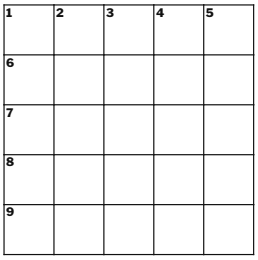

Parmesan goes on partway through, at 475°F.

The best crisps stick to the pan. That's the cook's share.

DEAR TIMES

Sunny now, showers later: when do I run my errands?

Dear Times, The morning looks bright, but I keep hearing rain is coming. Is there a window to get everything done outside today?

— Planning, Toronto

Dear Reader, Go this morning and early afternoon. Environment Canada has it mainly sunny at first, with cloud building and only a 30 percent chance of showers late this afternoon. Tonight is the wet part: a 60 percent chance of showers and an east wind gusting to 50. Thursday morning may be showery too before it clears, so anything that can't wait belongs on today's list.
