Hamburger lunch on Sigd, and two days of new month ahead

Cheshvan 29 · Toldot week · Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/

Zorah, today is a school Monday: the first Week 2 lunch is a hamburger with potato wedges and veggie sticks, and the calendar marks Sigd, the Ethiopian Jewish festival.

Toronto wakes to cloud and a northwest wind gusting to 40 km/h that eases through the morning, with a 30 percent chance of a shower early. The high is about 11°C, and tonight stays mainly cloudy with a low of 6. Tuesday is the pick of the week: sunny and 14°C.

Rosh Chodesh Kislev runs Tuesday and Wednesday, since Cheshvan has 30 days this year. Wednesday is also Remembrance Day, with the Grade 8 ceremony at school. Friday brings the 2:30 dismissal, progress reports and candles at 4:36. The Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/ keeps the running household list.

A pumpkin gravy with brown butter, sage and a little maple

Ozoz Sokoh roasts the pumpkin first, then strains the gravy silky for Serious Eats

Ozoz Sokoh's pumpkin gravy, published Friday on Serious Eats, starts by roasting a pound of sugar pumpkin, butternut or honeynut squash at 375°F for about 25 minutes, then mashing it with fresh ginger and garlic. Butter is browned with red onion and sage, a lightly browned roux goes in, and four cups of stock are whisked through before the gravy simmers with a bay leaf and is pressed through a fine-mesh strainer. Maple syrup and a splash of cider vinegar finish it. Unsweetened canned pumpkin can replace the roasting step.

Sokoh suggests it over roast turkey or chicken and crispy potatoes, and notes vegetable stock makes it vegetarian. Our note for a kosher kitchen, not the recipe's: butter and chicken stock can't share the pot. Use vegetable stock for a dairy meal, or swap the butter for oil or pareve margarine if it is going over chicken.

Six easy November outfits, built on coats and good trousers

Brittany Davy calls herself a minimalist, and her November list for Who What Wear keeps to easy formulas: a trench with smart trousers and ballet pumps; a knee-length car coat over a jumper and pencil skirt in grey, brown and black; and a suede jacket with a V-neck knit, dark baggy jeans and a bowling tote.

For days when jeans feel too casual, she pairs black tailored trousers with a funnel-neck wool coat and ankle boots. A bomber gets dressed up with a pencil skirt and riding boots, and her one colour risk is layering baby pink with cherry red over wide-leg jeans. With a 14° sunny Tuesday and colder days after, the coat looks earn their keep this week.

DEAR TIMES

Is Wednesday a day off for Remembrance Day?

Dear Times, Remembrance Day shows up on my holiday calendar as a holiday in Ontario, and Wednesday is also the second day of Rosh Chodesh. Do I plan for a day at home, or is it a regular school day with a lunch to think about?

— Planning Ahead, Toronto

Dear Reader, Plan for school. The school calendar has a full Wednesday: the Grade 8 Remembrance Day ceremony, sushi and edamame for lunch, and senior boys basketball against Leo Baeck at 4:00. The holiday listing is the provincial observance, not a school closure. If you want a quiet moment of your own, the city's ceremony at the Old City Hall Cenotaph starts at 10:45 a.m. and streams live.
