YOUR DAY

Out at 2:30, progress reports home, and flurries possible

Kislev 3 · 2:30 Dismissal · Candles 4:36 · Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/

Zorah, today is Kislev 3 on the school calendar, and RHA lets out early, at 2:30. Progress reports go home for JK to Grade 8, the senior girls have their soccer tournament, and lunch is chicken schnitzel or a meat sub with veggie sticks and challah. This week's parsha is Toldot, and candles are at 4:36.

Environment Canada's 5:00 a.m. forecast is cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain showers or flurries and a high of only 5°C, below the normal of 8. Pearson read 1.5°C under mostly cloudy skies at 4 a.m. Tonight stays cloudy with the same 30 percent chance, turning to flurries or showers near midnight, and a low of plus 1.

Saturday brings Jonah's hockey at 12:30, with northwest gusts to 40 in the afternoon and Shabbat ending at 5:38. Sunday has swimming at 12:55 and Stone's party at 3:00. Next week ends with two days off: no school Thursday for student-led conferences, with Jonah's school meeting at 6:10 p.m., and a PD day Friday.

COOKING

Keep the gravy hot for hours without giving up a burner

Serious Eats' Daniel Gritzer moves the gravy into a thermos, a water bath or onto a homemade French top

Daniel Gritzer's point for Serious Eats is that the hardest part of a big holiday meal is getting everything to the table hot, and gravy is the easiest dish to move out of the way. His first fix is an insulated carafe: heat the gravy until it is piping hot, preheat the carafe with boiling water if you like, pour it in and seal it. The fuller the carafe, the longer it holds, and he says it should stay hot for at least a couple of hours.

If you own an immersion circulator, set it between 150 and 165°F and stand a jar of gravy in the bath. A slow cooker or multi-cooker filled with hot water does the same job. Open containers can form a skin, so press wrap directly on the surface. His last trick is a French top: a baking steel or cast-iron griddle laid over two burners. Our note, not the article's: for a meat meal, use plastic wrap rather than the butter wrapper he also suggests.

Five winter shoes that make a plain outfit more interesting than black boots do

Michelle Scanga writes for Who What Wear that black boots will never go out of style, but this winter's more interesting shoes are giving them competition. Her five: suede loafers in chocolate, camel or taupe; two-tone shoes such as black with cream or brown with beige; zebra-print flats or heels; boots in chocolate, oxblood, burgundy or espresso; and high-vamp heels, cut higher over the top of the foot than a classic pump.

Her argument is that none of them needs a new wardrobe. Zebra flats change jeans and a black sweater, and burgundy boots make a neutral outfit look considered. Our note, not hers: with a 30 percent chance of flurries today, the leather boots are the safer pick, and the suede loafers can wait for Tuesday's sun.

The Distillery Winter Village is open, with Santa and carollers until 9 tonight

The Distillery Winter Village opened last night with its tree lighting and runs to January 3. Its own schedule for today lists shops open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., food and drink cabins from 11 a.m., and Santa, his elves and carollers from 1 to 9 p.m. Timed tickets are required from 4 p.m. on, so an early-dismissal afternoon visit before 4 skips that step.

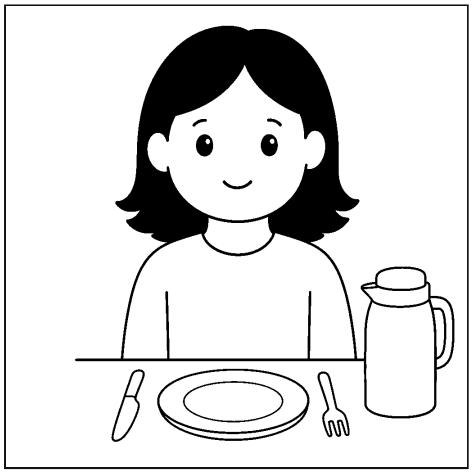

PUZZLES

Every burner is taken, and the gravy has nowhere to go.

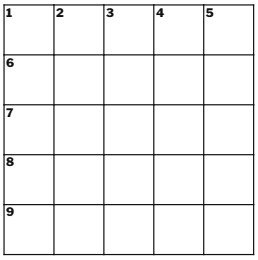

Get it piping hot, then pour it into the thermos and seal it.

DEAR TIMES

Progress reports come home today: how do I read one?

Dear Times, The report card arrives this afternoon. How do I go through it with my son without turning Friday dinner into a performance review?

— Reading Between the Lines, Toronto

Dear Reader, Read it on your own first, so your face is calm when he sees you. Then start with what he is proud of, and pick one thing to work on, not five. You do not have to settle everything tonight. School is closed Thursday for student-led conferences, and his school meeting is at 6:10 that evening, so save the bigger questions for the people who wrote it.
