DAILY BRIEF — ZORAH'S DAILY HOME

YOUR DAY

Hockey practice at 11:30, and a sunny Shabbat that ends at 7:03

Cheshvan 13 · Shabbat Lech-Lecha · Sunny, about 12°C by practice, high near 14°C, dry · Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/

Zorah, it is a clear, chilly Shabbat morning in Toronto – about 5°C before dawn and feeling closer to 2°C, dipping to about 4°C around 7 and 8. The sun is up at 7:43, and it stays sunny all day: about 12°C by late morning and a high near 14°C in the early afternoon, with no rain and only a light breeze.

Jonah's 11:30 hockey at Bill Bolton is a practice, not a game, per the calendar note, and it wraps at 12:30. That leaves a bright, quiet afternoon at home. Sunset is at 6:19, and Shabbat Lech-Lecha ends at 7:03.

Sunday stays dry and turns grey, with a high near 16°C, Jonah's 12:55 swim at Prosserman JCC, and the start of Week 2 lunches. Next Saturday is Halloween, with a 12:30 hockey game at Bill Bolton and a Halloween sleepover on the calendar.

RECOMMENDED COOKING

Yotam Ottolenghi's frittata with a whole block of feta

A 45-minute Sunday brunch from "Ottolenghi Simple Too," in NYT Cooking

Ottolenghi credits his test-kitchen colleague Katja Tausig with the idea: instead of crumbling the feta, she sets a whole 6- to 8-ounce block into the middle of the eggs. The recipe comes from his new cookbook "Ottolenghi Simple Too," and he suggests it for Sunday supper or an easy brunch, warm or at room temperature.

An onion softens in olive oil with crushed cumin seeds for about five minutes, then baby spinach and a full cup of chopped dill wilt in for five more. Eight whisked eggs go in, the feta is nestled in three-quarters submerged, and the 8-inch skillet bakes at 375°F for 20 to 35 minutes before two minutes under the broiler to brown the top. It finishes with more dill, Aleppo chile flakes and lime wedges, and serves four to six.

Six fall outfit formulas, from Paris to London

Audry Hiaoui keeps a few fallback outfits in mind so there is never a "nothing to wear" day; her own fall go-to is a fitted cardigan, a trench, capris and ballet flats. Scrolling Instagram, she pulled six more from European dressers: Sylvie Mus in a high-V-neck sweater with a pleated skirt and kitten heels, and Anne-Laure Mais pairing a crewneck and T-shirt with an embroidered midi skirt.

Stephanie Broek wears a Sézane scarf coat with mid-wash jeans and boots; Marilyn NK layers a navy button-down over a white T-shirt with black kick-flare pants and white ballet flats; Camille Charrière goes beige trench, black dress and pointed-toe pumps. Poppy Almond adds a car coat and green jeans, which Hiaoui calls the latest denim trend of fall 2026.

A pumpkin chili worth doubling for the freezer

In Bon Appétit's running list of what its editors cooked this month, cooking director Emma Laperruque – a vegetarian-chili person herself – made the magazine's pumpkin chili for a care package. It uses ground beef and two kinds of beans (she added lentils too), with a can of pumpkin purée in place of the usual tomato base. She doubled the batch, which she says is barely more work, and froze the extras for a cold night – a good Sunday project before a busy week.

DEAR TIMES

The hockey gear wants a dining chair — is it a guest now?

Dear Times, Every Saturday after practice, the gear comes home damp and spreads out to dry. This week it has its eye on a dining chair, and Shabbat lunch is at that table. Do I give it the seat, or find it somewhere else to sit until it's dry?

— Outnumbered by Shin Pads, Toronto

Dear Reader, Give it a seat, just not that one. Practice ends at 12:30, and the afternoon is sunny and near 14°C, so open the bag right away and spread everything on a rack or a chair by a bright window. Gloves and pads dry faster opened up than left in a heap. By the time Shabbat ends at 7:03, the table belongs to the family again.
