DAILY BRIEF — ZORAH'S DAILY HOME

YOUR DAY

Hockey at 10:30, the sleepover from 3:30, and Shabbat ends at 7:25

Tishrei 29 · sunny and cold this morning, clouding over after 2 p.m. · Rosh Chodesh Sunday and Monday, and Monday is Thanksgiving.

Zorah, today is the second-last day of Tishrei. Rosh Chodesh Cheshvan is Sunday and Monday, and Cheshvan is a month with no major Jewish holidays, so this is the end of the long run of holiday meals that started with Rosh Hashanah.

Two of today's times were corrected on the calendar yesterday. Jonah's Sabres practice is one hour, 10:30 to 11:30, and the sleepover at Stone's starts at 3:30, with pickup at 9 a.m. Sunday. That leaves almost four hours before the 12:55 swim lesson.

Looking ahead, next Saturday is a game, not a practice: the Sabres play the Flyers in their second exhibition at 1:30. Friday the 16th is also the deadline for Early Years re-registration at RHA.

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Julie Van Rosendaal fills a whole cabbage with barley and roasted vegetables for Thanksgiving

In an Oct. 7 Globe and Mail column, she makes a stuffed cabbage the centrepiece instead of the turkey, baked in a glass bowl and turned out to slice into wedges.

Julie Van Rosendaal suggests a whole stuffed cabbage as the main dish for anyone who wants a vegetable centrepiece at Thanksgiving. She says it can be filled almost any way you would stuff a bird. Her version uses barley, because it is one of Canada's biggest crops, along with a sheet pan of roasted fall vegetables such as carrots, beets, parsnips, squash and fennel.

She roasts the vegetables at 425°F for 30 to 45 minutes and mixes them with two to three cups of cooked barley, plus lemon juice or vinaigrette, cheese and herbs if you like. Then she cores a large green cabbage, peels off four or five outer leaves and lines an oiled 10-inch ovenproof glass bowl with them, stem ends up. The filling goes in, a few more leaves go on top, and a heavy cast-iron skillet sits on it to weigh it down for about 30 minutes in the oven. After it rests for 15 to 20 minutes, she turns it out onto a plate and cuts it into wedges, and the filling spills out as you slice. It serves six to eight.

MARIE CLAIRE

Marie Claire's Kristina Rutkowski lists the fall coats that went from the runways to the street

Kristina Rutkowski writes that after several seasons of oversized puffers, designers spent fall 2026 on coats and jackets with more shape and texture, and those pieces are now showing up in street-style photos from the fashion weeks. The trench coat came back with a high funnel neck at Kallmeyer and Tory Burch. She suggests keeping it in khaki, sage or brown and wearing it over a black dress for work or with white jeans and ballet flats on the weekend.

Leather jackets got shorter and closer-fitting at Balenciaga, Khaite and Altuzarra, and she pairs one with ordinary jeans. Capes and wraps from Proenza Schouler and Ralph Lauren work as a top layer while the weather keeps changing, and she recommends neutral colours so they go over suits, dresses or denim. Her list also includes bright anoraks, shearling, and long double-breasted wool coats with gold buttons.

THE TOWN

ON THE TOWN

Fall Harvest Market at Sugar Beach

Saturday, Oct. 10, and Sunday, Oct. 11, noon to 10 p.m.; Monday, Oct. 12, noon to 8 p.m. at Sugar Beach, East Bayfront waterfront. For the long weekend, the sand park with the pink umbrellas by the lake is set up as a fall market with local food and drink vendors and an artisan market. Kids can paint pumpkins, try pumpkin bowling and get their faces painted, and there are fire pits for toasting marshmallows. No ticket is needed, so it works as a short stop on a waterfront walk.

PumpkinFest Toronto

Saturday, Oct. 10, to Monday, Oct. 12, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily at Downsview Park (Festival Terrace), North York. Downsview Park has a large pumpkin patch for picking out a Halloween pumpkin, plus an inflatable corn maze, a trackless train and a pumpkin house. Admission covers the midway rides and bouncy castles as many times as kids want, and there are stage shows, a costume contest and food trucks. Tickets are sold online or at the gate.

Owner Mark Martone, who says he has eaten a bagel every morning for a decade, worked with chef Eli Kerbel on an airy, chewy sourdough bagel. The first menu is open-faced sandwiches, including smoked whitefish or salmon with cream cheese and a sweet one with cardamom cream cheese and clementine.

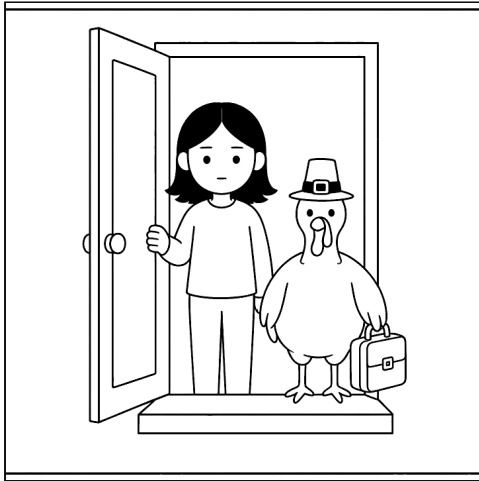

PUZZLES

Tishrei ends this weekend, after a month of Rosh Hashanah, Sukkot and Simchat Torah meals.

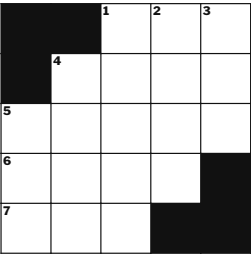

Next comes Cheshvan, a month with no major holidays at all.

DEAR TIMES

Should I pack a backup lunch on sushi day?

Dear Times, My son's school lunch on Wednesday is sushi with edamame. He is nine, and he says he likes the edamame but has never actually eaten the sushi. I could pack a sandwich in case he skips it, or send him with nothing extra and let him decide when he sees the tray. Should I pack a backup lunch on sushi day?

— Edamame Only, Toronto

Dear Reader, Leave the sandwich at home this time. If there is a backup in his bag, he has an easy reason not to try the sushi, and nine is a good age to find out whether he likes it. Put a larger snack in his bag for after school so a light lunch is not a problem. Thursday is Chinese food with a spring roll, so one quiet lunch will not last long.
