Vijaya Selvaraju tosses lo mein through a quick kung pao sauce

Her Oct. 14 recipe marinates cubed chicken breast, toasts dried chilis and peanuts in the wok, and finishes with green onions.

Vijaya Selvaraju starts by coating small cubes of chicken breast with corn starch, canola oil, Shaoxing wine, and salt, then stirs together a sauce of soy, oyster sauce, black vinegar, chili oil, dark soy, honey, and chicken bouillon.

The chicken cooks in a hot wok until done and comes out while garlic, ginger, and squares of sweet onion go in, followed by dried red chilis and raw peanuts to toast. Chicken, fresh lo mein, and the sauce return over high heat, and green onions go in at the end. She serves it hot – a one-wok Monday supper.

WHO WHAT WEAR

Kristen Nichols and WWW editors name five fall trends worth keeping

Kristen Nichols writes that fall 2026 is less about passing trends and more about pieces with longevity – the kind of jacket or woven fabric you might find in a closet decades from now and still want to wear. Editors point to jacquard and tapestry prints from Ralph Lauren and Dries Van Noten, and royal purple seen from Loewe to Tory Burch.

Fashion editor Sierra Mayhew suggests an oversize flannel plaid shirt with jeans and leather pumps, or a plaid wool coat if you buy just one piece. Nikki Chwatt says this year's military jacket is more refined, with concealed buttons and embroidery, worn with tailored trousers or slim bootcut jeans and ballet flats.

Teo Paul's pan-fried pickerel on toast with harissa gribiche

In this excerpt from Done Right, Teo Paul folds chopped soft-boiled eggs with shallot, pickles, aioli, Dijon, and harissa into a gribiche, toasts bread in duck fat, and fries pickerel pieces in an ice-cold tempura batter. Each fillet goes onto toast over the gribiche with a squeeze of lemon, with a lemony cabbage-and-carrot slaw on the side.

DEAR TIMES

Do I serve French toast at home when school serves it for lunch?

Dear Times, Jonah's school calendar says lunch today is breakfast — French toast and a fruit cup. I had half a mind to make French toast this morning anyway. Is that a theme day, or is that how a child ends up eating syrup twice before noon?

— Double-Dipped, Toronto

Dear Reader, Let the school own French toast today. Make the morning eggs, toast, or cereal and keep the syrup in the cupboard. Sunday after the 12:55 swim is a better slot anyway — nobody is racing a school bell, and the reviews will be warmer.
