DAILY BRIEF — ZORAH'S DAILY HOME

YOUR DAY

Sushi at lunch, a 4 o'clock game, and sun breaking through by mid-afternoon

Cheshvan 17 · Grey morning, sunny afternoon, high near 15°C, dry · JK Coffee with Claire at 7:45 p.m. · Daily brief at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/

Zorah, the frost is gone: about 9°C at 7 a.m. under grey skies, though a breeze near 15 km/h makes it feel closer to 5°C, so keep a warm layer for the drop-off. The sun rises at 7:48. It reaches about 12°C by noon, then the clouds clear around 2 p.m. and it peaks near 15°C at 3, with rain chances no higher than 3% all day.

At RHA it is sushi and edamame for lunch, the Sr. Girls play soccer, and the Sr. Boys host Leo Baeck in basketball at 4 p.m., when it should still be about 14°C and sunny. Sunset is at 6:13; it is about 10°C when the JK Coffee with Claire begins at 7:45. Your Daily brief is at sdltor.github.io/household-groceries/.

Thursday brings morning fog and a spike to about 21°C, with a 45% chance of showers late in the day. Friday is a 3:15 dismissal with candles at 5:53, Saturday is Halloween with 12:30 hockey and a sleepover, and the clocks go back an hour early Sunday, before Jonah's 12:55 swim.

Honey-roasted squash in a satay-style peanut sauce

Ellie Krieger's butternut squash over a lime-and-ginger peanut sauce, in The Washington Post

Ellie Krieger takes her cue from satay. Six cups of diced butternut squash, about one three-pound squash, are tossed with neutral oil, a tablespoon of honey and a pinch of salt, then roasted at 400°F for about 40 minutes, stirred once or twice, before the rest of the honey goes on. Pepitas toast for four to five minutes for crunch. It takes about an hour and serves four.

The sauce is blended from half a cup each of peanut butter and light coconut milk, lime juice, reduced-sodium soy sauce, a teaspoon of Thai red curry paste, fresh ginger and a small garlic clove, then warmed for five to seven minutes. Spoon it onto each plate, pile on the squash and finish with cilantro. Krieger serves it as a side for chicken or fish, or as a vegetarian main with noodles or rice; the sauce keeps four days.

Pile on the knits: six new ways to layer a sweater

Sweater weather is back, and Minty Mellon argues the humble knit is the best place to experiment, pointing to Celine's inventive layering, Marni's clash of prints and textures, and Polo Ralph Lauren's preppy-meets-western fall 2026 collections. Her nostalgic take puts a Fair Isle sweater vest over a crisp blue shirt with layered beads; the triple layer piles on three knits of different weights and textures, with a pop of colour.

A chunky zip-up gets colour blocking and a coordinating scarf. Cobalt blue and royal purple pair on a lighter cardigan, worn a little undone. A fine peplum turtleneck goes under a red crewneck and a black V-neck, and a classic cable knit, sized up for a slouchy feel, gets a ladylike twist from a set of brooches.

A fast chickpea saag from the pantry and freezer

In Bon Appétit's roundup of what its editors cooked this month, cooking director Emma Laperruque makes a giant batch of the magazine's Chickpea Saag for a care package. It leans on frozen spinach and canned chickpeas, ingredients she almost always has around, and with rice, Greek yogurt and lime wedges it is a cozy meal on its own; she likes a sprinkle of feta on top.

DEAR TIMES

Nine degrees but feels like five: do I still need the big coat?

Dear Times, Yesterday was frost and a hat. Today the app says 9°C at drop-off, then 15 by the afternoon basketball game, then I am out again at 7:45 for a school coffee. I own exactly one coat that feels right for all three. Do I bring it, or am I overthinking a Wednesday?

— Overdressed at Drop-Off, Toronto

Dear Reader, Bring the coat, but wear a knit under it. It feels near 5°C at 7 a.m. in the breeze, so the coat earns its keep at drop-off. By 3 it is about 15°C and sunny, and the knit alone carries you through the 4 o'clock game. At 7:45 it is about 10°C and clear, so the coat goes back on. Vogue's advice this week: layer your knits and let them show.
