CTV / MARY BERG

Mary Berg sears chicken thighs over cilantro rice and beans

Her Oct. 14 one-pan bake blends a cilantro-jalapeño broth with rice, black beans, and cumin-rubbed thighs.

Mary Berg seasons eight boneless chicken thighs with cumin, smoked paprika, and garlic powder, then sears them in an oven-safe skillet. She blends cilantro, jalapeño, green onions, and garlic with broth into a green cooking liquid.

Rice and black beans toast in the pan before the green broth goes in. The chicken returns seared-side up, the pan is covered, and it bakes at 375°F for about 30 minutes, then five minutes uncovered. Feta, extra cilantro, and lime finish the bowls.

WHO WHAT WEAR

Kristen Nichols writes that fall 2026 runways dialed color back up after seasons of muted neutrals. She flags royal purple, Yves Klein blue, poppy red, and buttercream as the season's main palette.

Purple shows up with drama at Loewe and Tory Burch; Yves Klein blue appears at Dries Van Noten, Givenchy, and Jil Sander and is already pointed toward spring 2027. Buttercream at Chanel and Tod's is the softer option when a full bold block feels like too much for a Toronto drizzle day.

DEAR TIMES

Does the Early Years form travel in the rain?

Dear Times, Today is the Early Years re-registration deadline, dismissal is at 3:15, and the forecast is drizzle. I keep picturing the form in a backpack that also holds a wet umbrella. Do I put the paperwork in a separate dry pouch, or is a regular folder enough for a short walk to the office?

— Damp Deadline, Toronto

Dear Reader, Use a sealed pouch or zip bag for the form and keep the umbrella in its own sleeve. Paper and wet nylon should not share a compartment for even a short walk. Hand the dry packet in, then deal with the umbrella.
