COOKING

A shepherd's pie with lentils and mushrooms, and crisp mashed peaks

Serious Eats builds the filling in stages, then roughs up the potato topping so it browns

Amanda Stanfield's Birmingham test-kitchen pie swaps ground meat for French green lentils, cremini and shiitake mushrooms, and sweet root vegetables under a blanket of mashed russets folded with warm cream and Parmesan. The lentils cook on their own so they stay intact; the mushrooms brown alone so they deepen instead of steaming. Tomato paste, thyme, bay, a splash of red wine, and reserved lentil liquid make the gravy.

Before baking, rough the potato surface with a fork so ridges and peaks crisp at 425°F. It serves eight and rests 15 minutes before scooping. Our note for a kosher kitchen: skip the Parmesan (or use a kosher hard cheese), swap Worcestershire for a kosher-pareve version or extra soy sauce, and skip the wine or use a kosher dry red. That swap is ours, not the recipe's.

FASHION

What it girls will actually buy in November, from leather skirts to fur-trim knits

Nikki Chwatt's November edit is about finishing touches as much as coats: a Reformation leather pencil skirt, Almina Concept wrap cardigans, Self-Portrait plush-trimmed knits, colored leather gloves, and a statement brooch. Massimo Dutti's curved-heel shoes and fluid batwing blouse sit beside Jenni Kayne's first denim and Madewell's sherpa-collar bomber.

She also flags Prada's returning Dalmatian calf-hair pouch and Toteme's Big T-Lock bag as the bags people will carry to Friendsgiving and the office party. The through-line is polished warmth – fur trim, satin, leather – without giving up the easy pieces you already live in.

THE TOWN

ON THE TOWN

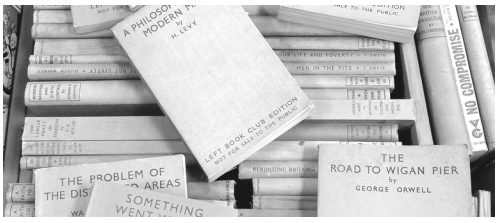

Royal Agricultural Winter Fair

Fri Nov 6–Sun Nov 15 at Exhibition Place. The country's largest indoor agricultural and equestrian fair returns with the Royal Horse Show, livestock, a holiday market, and food demos. Opening weekend lands right after early Shabbat Friday; Saturday after Shabbat ends at 5:45 is a natural window.

Goodnight Desdemona (Good Morning Juliet)

Fri Nov 6–Sun Nov 22 at Bluma Appel Theatre (Canadian Stage). Ann-Marie MacDonald returns to Canadian Stage for the 40th anniversary of her comedy that lets Desdemona and Juliet rewrite their endings. A strong Friday-or-Saturday night out once candles are lit and Shabbat has ended.

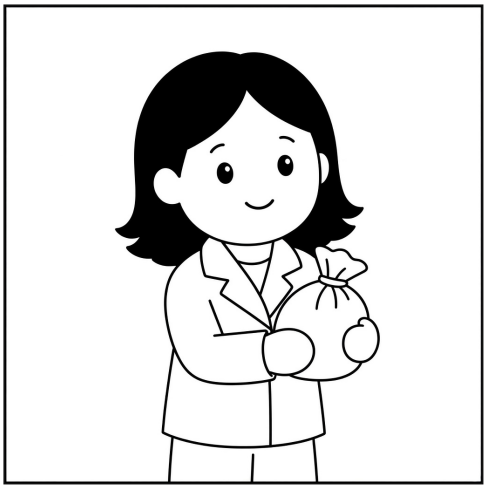

RECOMMENDED

A bookish party at the Drake, if Friday still has room

The Fifth Edit Club's Lit IRL night at the Drake Hotel on Friday mixes bookish cocktails, games, and live readings for people who want a social book club without the homework. Come alone or with your club; bring a favourite book or just curiosity. It sits on the first early-Shabbat Friday, so treat it as a maybe if the 2:30 dismissal already fills the afternoon.

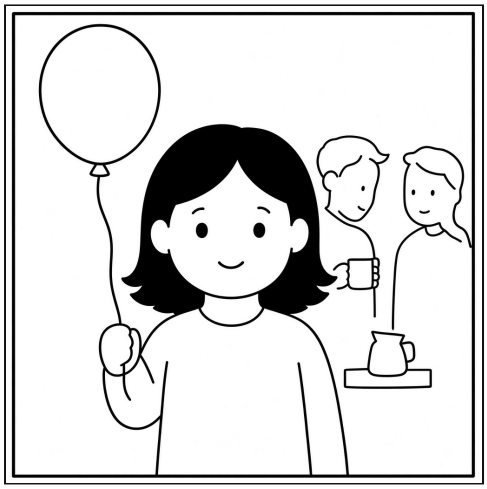

PUZZLES

5:30 p.m.: gift bag packed. Next stop is a friend's birthday party.

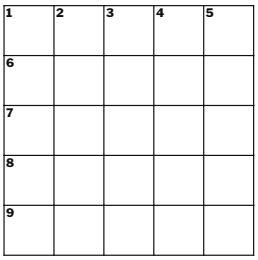

At the party, a balloon attaches itself. The clock is already leaning toward eight.

DEAR TIMES

Two stops, one balloon. Is that allowed at Coffee with Claire?

Dear Times, Tonight we go from a kids' birthday party straight to Grade 4 Coffee with Claire. Someone will hand my child a balloon. Do I confiscate it in the car, or walk into a quiet parent coffee still holding the string?

— Double-Booked, Toronto

Dear Reader, Walk in with it. Claire has seen worse than a balloon, and the other parents will know exactly which stop you came from. If it feels too loud for the room, tie it to a chair by the coats and reclaim it on the way out. The gift bag can stay in the car.
